

Internal Revenue Service (IRS) Limits on Deferred Compensation Plans

The University of Tennessee offers employees eligible to participate in retirement, the benefit of deferred compensation plans that allows them to supplement pension and social security in retirement and provides current tax reduction benefits. Under current tax law these employees are permitted to set aside a portion of their gross income and defer paying taxes on that income and any interest it earns until such time as they actually receive the funds (generally upon retirement). Plans offered are 401k, 403b and 457. The 401(k) Roth is also offered, but contributions are from after-tax dollars. However, if an employee participates in both a 401(k) and/or a 401(k) Roth, the limit is the same as shown below under the 401(k)/403(b) Deferral Limit.

Please contact Benefits and Retirement if you have any questions, retirement@tennessee.edu or 888-444-8847 or your local campus/institute office that handles deferred compensation.
