F O R E W O R D

For the first time in the history of the University of Tennessee, a Memphis Division of the Volunteer makes its appearance.

In this book the Staff had tried to present a true record of the biggest year of the Memphis Departments. In many places the record is not complete, and probably in many cases unauthentic. The Staff can only hope that the readers will be more pleased with the book as a whole than displeased with the weaker parts.

The Staff started the work with very little experience for reference, and no one knows better than the ones involved how dearly they paid in disappointments, in work, and in unsatisfactory results.

It is hoped that in these pages nothing will be found that might offend, for it was all written in a spirit of friendship and goodwill.

And now let us fan into flames that indomitable fire which smouldered in the breasts of those, who have gone before us, in their attempts to make this a great institution of higher education, and which now welds us all, no matter how diversified our interests may be, into a boundless love for Tennessee and our Alma Mater.

PRESIDENT HARCOURT A. MORGAN

TO
DR. HARCOURT A. MORGAN

President of the University of Tennessee, whose efforts for higher education have helped to make possible the present high standard of our institution, this, the first edition of the Memphis Division of the Volunteer, is respectfully dedicated.

In Memoriam

DR. R. SAUNDERS TOOMBS
DIED JULY 15, 1921

EXTRACTS OF EDITORIAL IN COMMERCIAL APPEAL

Dr. R. Saunders Toombs, one of the founders of the University of Tennessee College of Medicine at Memphis and for many years prominent in medical and business circles in Mississippi, was born in Copiah Co., Miss., in 1844. He went to Pleasant Hill Academy; later completing his medical education in New Orleans and Baltimore.

Dr. Toombs went to Greenville about 1878. Fever broke out soon afterwards, and the doctor was made secretary of the city board of health, and rendered splendid work. He later became a member of the State Board of Health, president of the Mississippi Medical Association, and prominent in the councils of national associations. He was the owner of a large estate in Washington county, and was interested in banks and other business enterprises. His people before him were sturdy Baptists, and Dr. Toombs was one of the men who helped to build up the strong Baptist church at Greenville.

In 1905 he came to Memphis and helped to found the College of Physicians and Surgeons. Through his efforts this college was taken over by the University of Tennessee, and the medical department of the University established. He was professor of Clinical Medicine until 1918, when he retired to become an emeritus.

Dr. Toombs was married in 1876 to Miss Fannie Ray of Carrollton. She, together with five children, survive: William Ray Toombs of Greenville, Dr. Percy W., Fred S., and Robert H. Toombs of Memphis, and Mrs. Steve Turnbull.

Dr. Toombs was a man of splendid character, perfect in manner, and true to the instincts of a gentleman. He was public spirited and generous. One of the great ambitions of his life was to make the medical school, of which he was one of the founders, worthy of the name and traditions of the University of a great state.

DR. JAMES BASSETT McELROY

The executive, the teacher, the true friend to every student, and the sterling man himself—than whom there is none better in our land, the Medical Department of the University of Tennessee probably owes its present existence as well as its bright prospects for the future.

A few months ago when it became the policy of the American Medical Association to curtail the number of Medical schools, and to permit only the richly endowed or strongly financed institutions to further function, and when our own school, the school we love and respect, was slated for the discard, which seemed inevitable, Dr. McElroy arose to meet the situation—just as Moses came forward to lead the children of Israel out of the wilderness—and by his wise and earnest endeavors, and by many personal and professional sacrifices, that he made, was able to safely steer our College through the turbulent waters of impending disaster.

In making these sacrifices Dr. McElroy has given much and received little. His fame and reputation as a Medical expert was assured. But rather than do original research work which would bring him even further fame or keep his name constantly on the tongue of the Medical profession, he has given several hours each day toward making our school the leading and the logical Medical center of the South.

To him, every citizen of the commonwealth of Tennessee every citizen of Memphis, every layman interested in any branch of higher and scientific learning, every physician interested in the advancement of Medical Science, every Alumnus of our school, and every student who honors and respects him, owes a debt of gratitude.

Lee, the personification of dignity. He refuses to be swayed from his original idea that Ear is pronounced Year and Deaf is Deef. But what has that got to do with weilding a scalpel or tying a knot?

THE OLD HOMESTEAD

My thoughts go back to the dear, old home,
Calling the wanderer to come,
With lure of dewy dawns and eves,
And robin songs and whispering leaves;
Its lights and shadows beckon me
Back to the land of used-to-be.
Where sleep was sweet and days were blest,
With peace and yuietude and rest.—
My thoughts go back.

My thoughts go back, the world, forsooth,
Has taken toll of zest and youth;
In payment for a hollow game,
A taste of wealth, a sip of fame;
Not one of which could e'er repay,
For that old roof of weathered gray.
Nor ever could the half compare,
With one brief hour of childhood there,—
I'm going back.

THE ANATOMIST TO HIS SWEETHEART

I list as thy heart and ascending aorta
Their volumes of valvular harmony pour;
And my soul from that muscular music has caught a
New life 'mid its anatomical lore.

Oh, rare is the sound when they ventricles throb,
In a systolic symphony measured and slow,
When the auricles answer with rymthical sob,
As they murmur a melody wonderously low!

Oh, thy cornea, love, has the radiant light
Of the sparkle that laughs in the icicle's sheen,
And thy crystalline, like a diamond bright,
Through the quivering frame of thine iris is seen.

And thy retina spreading its lustre of pearl,
Like the far-away nebula, distantly gleams
From a vault of black cellular mirrors that hurl
From their hexagon angles the silvery beams.

Oh! the flash of those orbs is enslaving me still,
As they roll 'neath the palpebrae, dimly trans-
lucent,
Obeying, in silence, the magical will
Of the oculomotor—pathetic—abducent.

—Neoplasm.

THE FRESHMAN WONDERS

Where a man can buy a cap for his knee,
Or a key for a lock of his hair?
Can his eyes be called an Academy,
Because there are pupils there?

In the crown of his head what gems are set?
Who travels the bridge of his nose?
Can he use, when shingling the roof of his mouth,
The nails on the ends of his toes?

What does he raise from a slip of his tongue?
Who plays on the drums of his ears?
And who can tell the cut and style,
Of the coat his stomach wears?

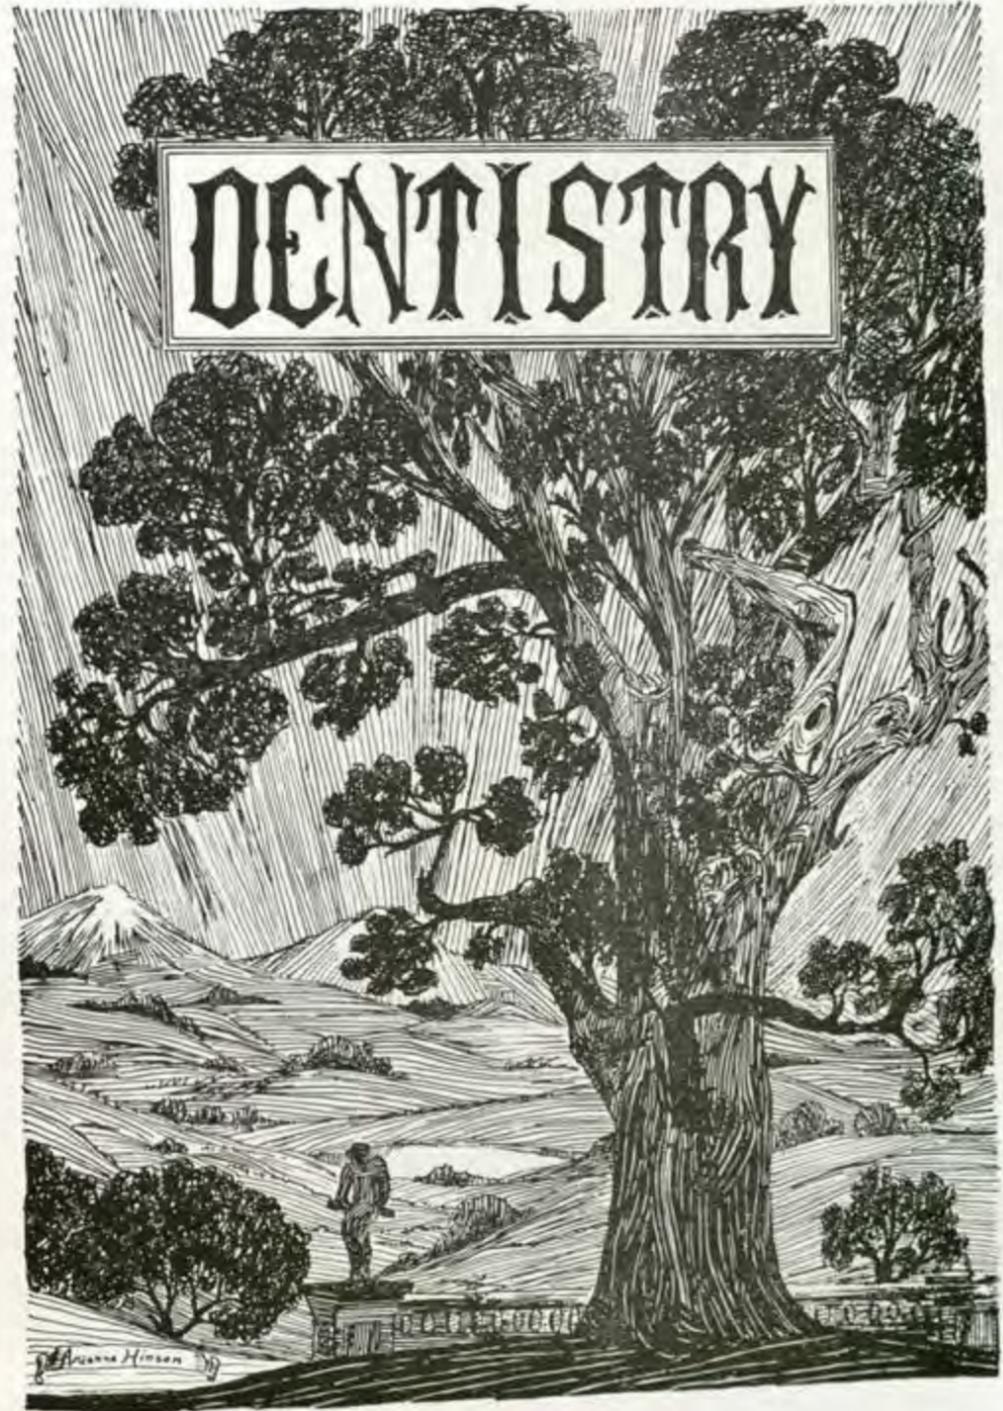

Can the crook of his elbow be sent to jail?
And, if so, what did he do?
How does he sharpen his shoulder blades?
I'll be hanged if I know—do you?

ROBERT SAMUEL COOKE
Arkansas

"Cooky" hails from Arkansas, but since securing passports into the United States, he has redeemed himself in rendering services to humanity in a dental capacity. His fellow-citizens will recognize in him the Dental Genius he is, when he returns to his native country to practice.

HYMAN M. DAVIS
Tennessee
Class Historian

"Hy" is indebted to this school for four full years, and we are sure that the institution was fortunate in having a man of his ability. Davis has a splendid personality, is thorough in his work, and we believe that in future years he will do honor to his profession. When it comes to popularity with the fair sex, Wally Reid has nothing on "Handsome Hy." Look up, Boy, we are expecting great things of you.

RICHARD DAGGARD DEAN
Tennessee

Too much praise cannot be showered upon this individual star of the class. His career in school will always be regarded as a model after which any student will be proud to follow. An always conscientious man, ever working and digging. Dr. Dean will contribute research work to his profession, which will more than merit the oft-reflected praise due him.

SIDNEY S. FRIEDMAN
Tennessee

Whoopie! Yea! Between playing a piano, beating a drum, and unleashing a verbal hemorrhage, Sidney has succeeded in entertaining the entire college for four years; but now he is settling down to allow the world to beat a path to his door. Gold plates will be Sidney's specialty. Hail to his success.

M. F. GARDNER
Iowa

Signals! "Scrapiron" Gardner's fame will long be remembered on the gridiron. A broken nose means nothing in his young life. He was doing it for his Alma Mater. Jack is going to specialize on indirect inlays, and he bears the reputation of being the fastest man that hit the pike. Look-out, fellow practioners, you are going to hear of big things when this Doctor places his hat in the ring.

JOHN RALSTON GRAGG
Tennessee

Shakespeare said, "Give every man thine ear and few thy voice." Gragg believes in attending to his own business. He has a record of never borrowing an instrument as long as he has been in school; but that record dosen't apply to pennies for street car fare. This man should be a credit to his community.

JOSEPH ASHNER GRONAUER
Tennessee
Class President

"Handsome Joe" The girls love him, dog-gone it, for the Lord blessed him with all of Sheldon's endowments and he has developed all the highest attainments. The hardest working man in school, and an idol of no mean consideration. Joe is determined to make a mark in the world—here's hoping.

GEORGE WARREN HOLTZCLAW
Arkansas
Class Vice-President

A tenor to rival John McCormick. George surely missed his calling. A leader in the quartet, ever optimistic, and smiling. "Hotch" should be a winner from the start, with his pleasing personality and varied ability at the chair.

RUDOLPH MARSCHALL
Texas

"Marsh" journeyed a long way to come to a good school. So to please Texas the faculty turned out a finished product to show the other "Lone Stars" what can be done with good material. Slow but sure, his work has been of the highest character and irreproachable. It is the sincere wish of all that glorious success will be visited upon him.

SAMUEL PEARLMAN
New York

"Cuppy" laid the foundation for his chosen profession at the New York College of Dentistry and 'twas only in his Senior year that we had to groom him. The fact that he was chairman of the presentation committee of the football loving cup assures him of future remembrance, as the cup bears his name. "Cuppy" knows his onions, and will be an asset to any community that is fortunate enough to secure his services.

CLAGGARD GIBBS TUCKER
Tennessee
Secretary-Treasurer

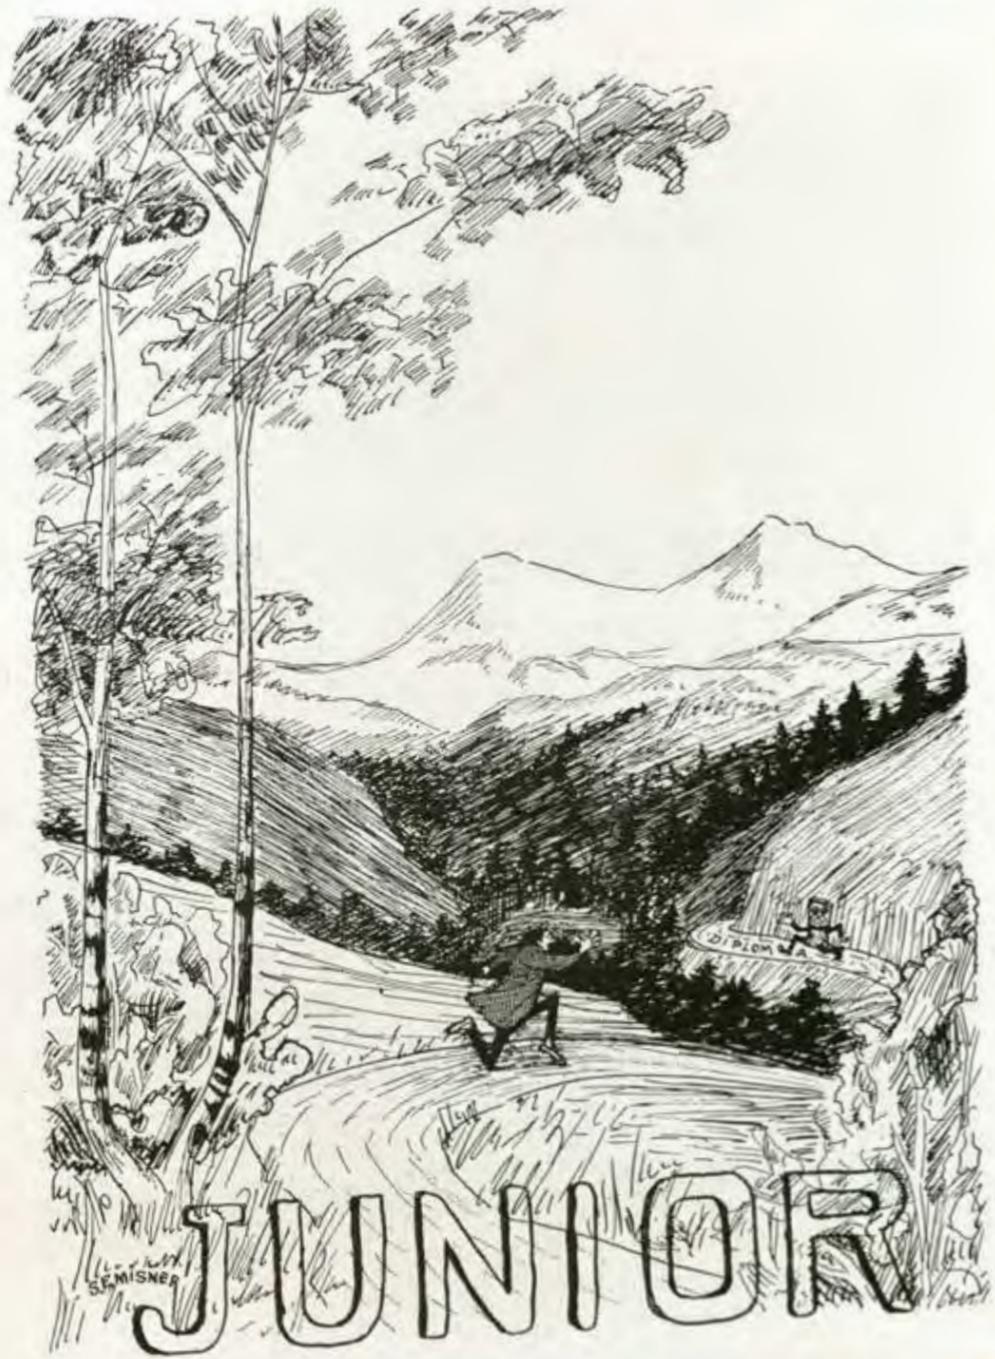

"Full of josh and full of pep,
With the girls he made a rep.
He knocks them cockoo, one and all,
And still goes on for another to fall"

"Tuck" is good in his professional work, as well as good with the girls, and promises to make good when he goes out into the world.

A MAN'S PRAYER

Teach me that 60 minutes makes an hour, 16 ounces one pound and 100 cents one dollar. Help me to so live that I can lie down at night with a clear conscience, without a gun under my pillow and unhaunted by the faces of those to whom I have brought pain. Grant that I may earn my meal-ticket on the square, and that in earning it I may do unto others as I would have them do unto me. Deafen me to the jingle of tainted money and to the rustle of unholy skirts. Blind me to the faults of the other fellow, but reveal to me my own. Guide me so that whenever I look into the faces of my friends I will have nothing to conceal. Keep me young enough to laugh with little children, and sympathetic enough to be considerate of old age. And when comes the day of darkened shades and the smell of flowers, the tread of soft footsteps and the crouching of wheels in the yard . . . make the ceremony short and the epitaph simple . . . "HERE LIES A MAN."

The Volunteer ~ 1922

The Volunteer 1922

The Volunteer 1922

Breathes there the Frosh with soul so dead,
 Who never to himself hath said,
 As he opened his eyes to the morning light,
 "I hope that school burned down last night."
 If such there breathe, go, mark him well;
 He never saw a gambling hell;
 High though his titles, proud his name,
 Solid his grades as wish could claim,
 Despite his grades and thoughtful looks,
 The wretch, concentered all in books,
 Living shall forfeit all the fun,
 And passing on when his course is done
 Into the world from whence he come
 A little wiser but twice as dumb.

TO

Miss Myrtle Marion Archer

Who, for eight years, has so wisely and efficiently directed this training school as its Superintendent of Nurses, this Section of the Volunteer is respectfully dedicated by the Baptist Memorial Hospital School of Nursing.

The Baptist Memorial Hospital Training School for Nurses was established July, 1912, at which time two other training schools were merged into the Baptist Memorial Training School. These schools were the Maury-Ellett Sanitarium of Memphis, and the Johnson Sanitarium of Yazoo City, Miss. Their students constituted an important part of the hospital at this particular time, as they obviated the necessity of the hospital depending upon its limited staff and probationers for care of the patients. Added to this group were the hospital's own first student nurses who were six in number the first day; most of whom finished the course and after graduation have done most creditable in institutional work, public health, and private duty.

Miss Florence Bishop, of Miami Valley General Hospital, Dayton, Ohio, was the first Superintendent of the school. She was in charge one and one-half years. Upon her retirement, Miss Alice Gorman, of the Mass. General Hospital, became Superintendent. She acted in this capacity for two years. Much might be said of the very excellent work of these two splendid nurses who came to the hospital during the first difficult years, which all new schools must experience. During the Summer of 1914 Miss Gorman resigned and was succeeded by Miss Myrtle Archer, graduate of the Memphis General Hospital, who had previously served in the capacities of Supervisor and Assistant Superintendent of Nurses.

During 1917, following the U. S. joining the Allies in the World War, this school was well represented in the two units organized here for duty overseas. Ours was among the first to go. They served in American and French hospitals, and by their faithfulness and efficiency reflected much credit upon their Alma Mater. During this period, Miss Margaret Irby of the Knoxville General and Miss Vera Scribner of Long Island College Hospitals, acted as Superintendents of the School. The nurses at the hospital were greatly tasked because their number had been depleted and the number of patients had been increased, for the influenza epidemic placed upon them an extra burden. They nobly faced this emergency and at all times carried well their part of the load.

At the present this school numbers 106. Its student body is active and progressive, and thoroughly co-operative with its directors in whatever promotes a better realization of nursing ideals, and best service to the helpless. The School is one of the standard schools of Nursing.

The lecturing staff is provided by the University of Tennessee, with a full time instructoress, who is a graduate of this school.

The new home, which the nurses now occupy, is a gift of Mr. Will Dockery, and is a splendid memorial to his wife, in whose memory it was given. This beautiful home will greatly increase our capacity for usefulness.

All graduates of the school in good standing are members of the Alumnae Association, an organization which is an active member of the State and National Nursing Association. Its members are benefited by it both professionally and Materially. The Baptist Hospital Training School graduates have supplied many important institutional positions.

The Hospital works in conjunction with all organized charities and serves many patients annually. It is also an important educational institution. Its influence is felt throughout the South. Its development has been phenomenal, and its future is promising.

TO MY NURSE

It is a well known fact that all of your patients die. Not one of them has ever been known to get well and regain strength. Lucky are they who die before falling into your hands. We pity all who receive your services. And say, your bandaging would stop the circulation of a steam-pipe. Nursing is a fine art. When you nurse, the undertakers rejoice. Fortunate for all when you get wise to this and feel like quitting. Thus we estimate your ability.

THE SAME OLD THINGS

The world grows better year by year,
 Because a nurse in her little sphere
 Puts on apron and grins and sings
 And keeps on doing the SAME OLD THINGS.

Taking the temperature, giving pills,
 To remedy mankind's numberless ills;
 Feeding the baby, answering bells,
 Being polite with a heart that rebels.

Longing for home, and all the while,
 Wearing the same old professional smile;
 Blessing the new-born babe's first breath,
 Closing the eyes that are still in death.

Taking the blame for others' mistakes,
 Oh, dear! what a lot of patience it takes!
 Going off duty at seven o'clock,
 Tired, discouraged, just ready to drop.

But called back on "Special" at seven fifteen,
 With woe in her heart, but it must not be seen,
 Morning and evening, noon and night,
 Just doing it over, and hoping it's right.

When we lay down our caps, and cross the bar,
 O Lord, will you give us just one little star
 To wear in our crowns with the uniform new
 In that city above where the head nurse is You?

TWENTY-THIRD PSALM

The doctors are my teachers, I shall not pass. They make me to show and prove my ignorance in the presence of their classes. They restore my sorrow; they cause me to be ashamed for my grade's sake. Yea, tho I study until ten o'clock I shall gain no knowledge; for Pediatrics does worry me, and Obstetrics does addle my soul. They prepare oral quizzes in the presence of mine class mates; they give me low grades. My stupidity runneth over. Surely sadness and distress shall follow me all the days of my life, and I shall dwell in the Baptist Memorial Hospital forever.

MAGIC MIRROR REVELATIONS OF THE SENIOR CLASS

In Pensive Mood, bringing before my mental vision members of our class, I wondered what we should be doing ten years hence. As I mused, many strange thoughts came. How different the lives of the members of our class might be! Suddenly I heard a voice, the voice of a fairy, which said, "You wish to know the future of your classmates?"

"It is not well to seek to know the future; to know the future is the privilege of only a few, but you are one of the favored. Come with me."

I followed. I was led thru winding ways knowing not whither I went. Suddenly I was stopped by a wall of rock. I started to turn back, when a door opened in the rock and the voice bids me enter. I stepped in, and truly I thought it was an enchanted country. I knew not what to do. Again the voice, "Step boldly forward. Soon wilt thou be accustomed to this place." In the middle of the cave, which we had entered, I saw three beings.

"Are you the Fates?" I asked with trembling voice.

"We are," they answered. "For long years, aye, for centuries have we dwelt here. Never since the days of ancient Greece have mortal eyes beheld us. You are a favored mortal. What is your request?" Ere I could answer, the oldest of the Fates replied.

"To read the future of her classmate of 1922, the said Eugenia Crouch doth come."

"Be it so; follow me," said the next of the Fates. We passed through a labyrinth of winding passages and at last came to a halt in total darkness. Nothing whatever could be seen until my guide lighted a candle, when I saw I was in a small cave, at the end of which was a large mirror.

"This is the cave which conceals the magic mirror," said my guide. "Yonder is the enchanted glass itself. Look therein and listen carefully."

Breathlessly I waited. My guide kindled, in a small basin, a fire of aromatic herbs, muttering all the while in a sing-song voice. She placed the basin in front of the mirror and blew out the candle. The mirror was now illuminated brightly; the rest of the cave being dark. Presently I saw a change in the mirror.

I seemed to be looking into the same old hospital. Among the nurses alleviating pain and soothing patients, one seemed very familiar. All the years had not changed her; she was still the same happy Besse Montgomery. I believe she was even more beautiful than when she graduated. This vision faded.

Then came a doctor's office. Whom should I see but Miss Eva Montgomery. Don't misunderstand me. I do not mean that she was a doctor; but a doctor had conquered her fear so completely that she was no longer known as Miss Montgomery.

Next I saw a beautiful garden, in which violets were the principle flowers. A lady and gentleman appeared walking in the garden. As she raised her head I recognized her as Miss Marsh, and she seemed to be as fond of Mr. Hawkins as ever.

The next scene was a group of probationers trying to imitate their head nurse. A thin, cross looking little woman, with a stiff uniform came in, whom I recognized as Miss Harvey.

Next in store window was a large placard announcing the demonstration of a Noiseless Ether Machine. In the store was Miss Binford, inventress of the outfit. No doubt, she had profited by her experience in the tonsil rooms.

I next saw sitting in a beautiful little farmyard, a fair lady, whom I recognized as Miss Jameson. The farm life, with the devotion of her husband, George, had made Miss Jameson strong and beautiful.

I next saw a beautiful reception room filled with talented and learned people. The hostess was Miss Prichard; society leader. She had given up nursing altogether. To attend her social functions was considered a great favor. The center of attraction was Miss Garabedian, just returned from Armenia. Miss Garabedian was accompanied by Mousheck, her husband, and eleven children. With all her family cares she was able to make daily visits with her little pill bag, and relieve the suffering Armenians.

The following picture showed a gondola floating on the canals of Venice. In it was Miss Smith, married to an Italian count.

A large and attractive building next caught my attention. On the lawn sat Miss Ethel Crouch, chief nurse of an orphan asylum, surrounded by a host of children.

An Old Maids Hall formed the next picture. Here was living a happy bunch of girls who never had a care. They were not easily recognized, as they had aged so rapidly. Doubtless you all know them; the Misses Weekley, McDaniels, and Wilkerson. They had all settled down to a "single state of blessedness." They had done their part as Angels of Mercy. Each had a pet cat, so I concluded they had lost all hopes. Miss McDaniels, however, still talks of Roy, and Miss Weekly makes daily mention of Dr. Sublett in her prayer. Miss Wilkerson has pride enough to conceal all her heart aches.

This scene faded away. I saw a room in which sat Miss Morton, talking to herself. I heard her say, "Yes, I suppose I am fond of hobbies. I taught school, was governess, and then a nurse. What they'll say to this latest wrinkle, brought about by the preacher, I don't know."

I next saw Miss Campbell busy in her laboratory. She had discovered the bacillus causing cancer, and was now famous.

Then came the voice of my Fairy.

"Seek no longer to look into the future. The thread of prophecy has come to an end."

Had I been dreaming? I found myself in my own room, my watch revealed it to be one A. M., sheets of my manuscript lay on the table and floor, and I was much bewildered over my experiences. I called to my Fairy to give me again the Magic Mirror, to see what it held for me, but no response came.

SENIOR CLASS HISTORY

During the period of reconstruction, after the World War, young women from many states, with high ideas and anxious to do their bit, decided to take up the noble profession of nursing. Thus the class of 1922 began.

To each mind the gentle art of nursing presented a different picture. To place a cool hand on a fevered brow and scatter smiles and sunshine seemed to be the predominating idea; but during the first few days it was learned that the "Hopper Room" was the private office of every little "Probie."

After three weary months, when she donned her stripes (not bars) and little cap, she was a "real" nurse and ready for night duty with its increasing responsibilities. This made her break the tenth commandment. But about 4 A. M. a little white bed presented a picture of all the necessities of this life.

Time seemed to fly, Summer vacations were over, and our class work was resumed. We were now privileged to hear some of the South's greatest specialists lecture.

Joy and sorrow mingled with us as always happens, for we lost some of our members. Some, cupid captured, but two were claimed by the Angel of Death.

Busy as we were, we did not neglect our social functions. About two weeks before graduation we entertained the Seniors with a theatre party, after which we christened the new dining room, and discovered that there was marked talent (?) in the class.

As the Seniors departed and placed their mantle of Seniorhood upon us, we in turn accepted this as a gracious gift and proved our appreciation by a black band upon our cap.

"The Powers that be" recognized our efficiency and sent us to the First Aid Station at the Tri-State Fair to represent the hospital and its various departments, where great numbers were administered unto.

Surgical training was to be considered in our eventful lives. As each girl entered this sphere she learned that in this place cleanliness came before Godliness. She also learned that many things were "too bad."

SENIOR CLASS WILL

We, the class of 1922, do hereby bequeath to the intermediate class, our dignity, intelligence, our congeniality and our privilege to go with the Internes.

I, Bess Montgomery, do hereby bequeath to Victoria King my style of hair dressing, and assure her that she will not be told by Miss Archer to dress it more plainly.

I, Eva Montgomery, do hereby bequeath to the girls my new discovery as to the correct method of securing a husband.

I, Anna Lois Harvey, do hereby bequeath my knowledge of Pediatrics to S. B. Hawkins. I think that with a few months on the third floor she will be a noted Pediatrician.

I, Francis Marsh, do hereby bequeath my laboratory training to some pretty probie, and hope she will derive as much pleasure as I have.

I, Lora Jamison, do hereby bequeath to the Intermediates all my city airs, for I'm going back to the farm and milk the cows and chickens.

I, Neva Campbell, do hereby bequeath to the most imposed upon Junior my popularity with the Staff.

I, Cornelia Amelia Prichard, do hereby bequeath to Miss Despain my winning ways, and hope she will win as many smiles from the opposite sex as I have.

I, Letha Smith, do hereby bequeath to Miss Turner by super-abundance of energy, and to Miss Howse my surplus amount of curiosity.

I, Tarwanda Garabedian, do hereby bequeath my well worn shoes to the first probie Miss Archie finds without rubber heels, for such is the rule: "Thou must not appear heel-less."

I, Gertrude Binford, do hereby bequeath my extra-ordinary knowledge of T. & A. surgery to the next victim of 841.

I, Ann McDaniels, do hereby bequeath to Mazie Sherrod my corner in the Superintendent's office, but wish to add that if you wait till your Senior year you can walk thru the lobby with the dear Dr.

I, Jean Crouch, do hereby bequeath my knowledge of patching gloves to any poor girl who has this wished upon her.

I, Clara Wilkerson, do hereby bequeath to the next inhabitants of 244 the privilege of burning their lights after 10:30 P. M. I will not leave my habit of gossiping to any one. I need it myself for the future.

I, Mozelle Weekly, do hereby bequeath my popularity with the Drs. to Miss Stahmer, for without this I fear I would have spent my declining years in the Old Ladies' Home.

I, Ethel Crouch, do hereby bequeath my church going habits to Miss Banks, and hope she will enjoy this more than Sunday shows.

I, Hattie Morton, do hereby bequeath my speed to any girl who may be inclined to be slow.

CASTOR OIL.

I don't mind lickin's, now and then,
An' I can even stand it when
My mother calls me in from play
To run some errand right away.
There's things 'bout bein' just a boy
That ain't all happiness an' joy,
But I suppose I've got to stand
My share of trouble in this land,
An' I ain't kickin' much—but say,
The worst of parents is that they
Don't realize just how they spoil
A feller's life with castor oil.
Of all the awful stuff, gee whiz!
That is the very worst there is.
An' every time if I complain,
Or say I got a little pain,
There's nothing else that they can think
'Cept castor oil fer me to drink.
I notice, too, when Pa is ill,
That he gets fixed up with a pill,
An' Pa don't handle mother rough
An' make her swallow nasty stuff;
But when I've got a little ache,
It's castor oil I've got to take.
I don't mind goin' up to bed,
Afore I get the chapter read,
I don't mind being scolded, too,
For lots of things I didn't do;
But gee! I hate it when they say
"Come! Swallow this an' right away!"
Let poets sing about the joy
It is to be a little boy,
I'll tell the truth about my case,
The poets here can have my place,
An' I will take their life of toil,
If they will take my castor oil.

INTERMEDIATE CLASS HISTORY

We have always been impressed with the Seniors. It has been instilled into us since our probation days that we're born to be nurses. While we,—well, it has been drilled into us, day by day, that we would NEVER make nurses. And now, after eighteen months of hard labor within the walls of this Baptist Memorial Hospital, we are beginning to realize this most distressing fact. If you will consider with us each member of our class, you will arrive at the same conclusion.

You see, to begin with, we have Irene DeSpain, who should have joined the Hollywood stars where she might revel in paint and powder; while here she has to abide by the bulletin board.

Her dearest friend, Myrle Goodman, missed a calling vastly different. Instead of our little white cap sitting on her thoughtful head, there should have rested the soft and clinging folds of a Nun's veil.

It is distressing to consider that there is only one drug store in the neighborhood. There should be the City Hospital and a drug store, the Baptist Hospital and a drug store, the Clinics and a drug store, the Baseball grounds and a drug store, the Fire Department and a drug store—in fact, every available spot with a drug store thereon would not be enough for Edna Meredith.

Speaking of drug stores; Miss Cates has apparently known more about them than was good for her, for she was entirely too bulky when she entered training. She should first have tried Dr. Fontain's Diebetic Diet. But now that she is here, we suggest that she help poor little Lucile Archer (threatened we fear by T. B.), with a tissue transfusion.

And though Ludie Smith is a good nurse, she probably will never—no never—understand how sometimes "Relsis" rearranged spells "Office."

Even this doleful fact is as nothing in comparison with something which brings tears to our eyes, throws our oesophagus into a state of dysphagia—Mary Virginia Banks is gradually losing her mind over the babies on the third floor.

There is also to consider the appalling fact that this institution has used 90 gallons of milk per day. Who is responsible for this? Naomi Williams. She has a Herd.

Miss Hammock should have never considered nursing, when, without a Staff of love, she finds it miserable climbing.

It is unfortunate that anyone, who finds working with doctors so uncongenial as Agnes Williams does, should have continued in training.

As for Miss Cresop, it has developed that her natural inclinations have always been mechanical. She discriminates expertly in the matter of cars, preferring Fords with Goodyear tires to any other.

Mrs. Mockbee's aristocratic instincts make her present life difficult, for she prefers the companionship of Kings and Queens.

This spirit of Dissatisfaction has developed also in Miss Hawkins, who is absorbed in the study of the "Wrights" and wrongs of life.

And though Miss Kenny hails from Kentucky, the land of wild horses and pretty women, she is an inveterate man hater and should never have come here.

It is sad to think that there can be no mental osmosis between Miss Ora Jacobs, whose weakness we merely suggest, and Miss Kenny, producing thereby a more wholesome balance.

Mary Ellen King has always been handicapped by most unlovely features but of course she was born that way and it can't be helped.

Miss Clark should have gone into politics, for her efforts here in an executive line have been limited to the choir, orchestra, class, training school, and diverse other things.

In contrast to all this weary report, we offer Miss Nixon, whose optimism should never have been wasted in training.

Miss Jones, whom we think, by constant persevering, may come the nearest of any of the members of the Intermediate Class to being a nurse.

And last, but not least, comes the baby of our class, Miss Virginia Howse, who has every characteristic of a baby; even to her little white apron, which she finds impossible to keep clean.

JUST SENIORS

Mary Lowry used to be man wild,
Has been that way since she was a child;
And of the men she ever met,
She found just one she couldn't forget;
Was afraid she would lose him but she didn't dare,
So she bought her some scissors and bobbed her hair:
But now that she's got him she knows not what to do,
For she's afraid she will be like the "Old Woman in the shoe."

Lillian Sparks has a beau that takes her on drives devine,
She used to think she loved him but now she's changed her mind;
For he promised to buy a car, so the country they could scout
But instead of buying a car he bought a Ford runabout.

Snip Mayoza is a pretty good old scout,
But all she can talk of is getting out;
She's a very good nurse, so they all say,
But we expect her to leave us most any day;
For she has a husband who lives all alone,
So that's why Snip is in a hurry to get home.

Canie Dee Hawkins is a loud mouth pest,
Who talks with speed like the winds of the West;
She keeps Miss Julia on her heels thru the hall,
And for the things she does, her bunkie gets blamed for them all.

She has a darling who is a Miss Clark,
And at the Baptist Hospital they always park;
But as her darling's a woman, and so is she,
Two old maids they're doomed to be.

Doris Rudisill is a red-headed girl,
But you should see her when her hair isn't curled;
During her first two years here the boys she did hate,
And to all her admirers she would not gave a date;
But her last year in training she changed quite a bit,
And with all the men she made quite a hit;
Although "Rudy" is a most grown up little lady,
We'll always remember her as the biggest baby.

Julia Terrell is a good sweet girl,
You don't find many like her in this world.
When advice we desire we all go to "Judy,"
And if you don't believe she's a friend indeed, ask "Rudy."
She's a dandy good Texan and can bake a good pie,
And the man that wins Judy is some lucky guy.

JUNIOR CLASS HISTORY

The year 1921 will go down in history as one of unusual events, the most important ones occurring in August and September.

For it was in August that Misses Campbell, Trapp, Epperson, Wiseman and Lowery did some deep and serious thinking. That thinking resulted in their adopting the Florence Nightingale Pledge, which they vowed they would faithfully (?) keep during their three years of training; also "forever and ever."

Miss Campbell soon became every ones friend and her popularity is shown by her being elected President of her class.

Miss Trapp's name was well chosen, for several young men have themselves deeply entangled within the net, which she so cunningly spreads. Her only worry is how "to get by" on three dates a week.

One minute you will find Miss Epperson thinking of a new trick or a joke. Then when you find her quiet and dreaming, and ask her what's the matter, she will only shake her head and sigh. But it is known that she is thinking of the day when she will be a Shepherdess.

Miss Wiseman's name was also well chosen, for while others are sleeping or thinking of the next dance or picture show, this WISE girl is answering all the questions that are asked in anatomy, physiology and materia medica.

Last, but not least, is Miss Lowery, our little nurse with golden curls and laughing blue eyes. She is tall and heavy set, and weighs 95 1-3 pounds in the shade. Her chief desire is to be on private duty.

In September the doors of the Memphis General Hospital again opened. This time people seemed amazed and stared rudely, and spoke of "babies"; also of having to stand in chairs to make beds. But Misses Shearin, Brock, Neubauer, Dodson and Marable proudly held up their heads, and they are still trying to prove that bigness in size dosen't mean everything.

Miss Shearin began her career with the motto, "all work and no play" and she is still sticking to it, despite the influence of her room-mate, whose motto it, "take it easy, have your fun and let the old world flicker on." Miss Shearin's only worry is, "will I ever get a black band and then a white uniform?"

Mrs. Brock evidently doesn't intend to do twenty four hour duty upon graduating, for she just can't keep awake.

Wanted: A cot on H ward in the medicine room. 'Nuff sed.

Miss Neubauer came a week later than the others, but soon made up for lost time. She now spends most of her time laughing and chasing butterflies. Refer to her for an explanation.

Miss Dodson, better known as "Dottie," is loved by every one. She is also generally accepted as the "smallest" nurse in the training school. Miss Marable, the class comedienne, has an idiosyncrasy for "cocci bacilli." Her highest ambition is rehearsing acrobatic stunts, and wearing apparel in preparation for a debut on the stage.

Nurses may laugh and nurses may smile, but Miss Marable will giggle forever.

When the doors of the Memphis General Hospital opened for a third time, Misses Fowler and McMinn entered, making the class number twelve.

Miss Fowler, a girl of brains and much intelligence and great beauty, having become popular by her own assertions, has reached the stage where her beauty must be "isolated" in order to be kept intact.

Miss McMinn is a very professional nurse, and analgesic in manner on duty. She is also a great believer in cosmetics and borrowed fineries.

Judging from the tactful way in which these twelve enthusiastic young nurses began their work, the authorities of the hospital firmly believe that they will have something to be proud of at the end of three years.

CLASS HISTORY '22

In January of the year 1919, when two girls entered training at the Memphis General Hospital, little did they think that by the end of the year, the class which they had started would be one of such notoriety. For four long months the two worked faithfully, as some probationers do, and happy indeed were they when they cast aside their probation uniforms, and became, in their own estimation, full fledged nurses. Now that they were cap nurses, their long days of work and worry were over,—so they thought at the time. But oh! how soon they were to realize the vast difference between the menial work of a "probe" and the more complex work and responsibility of a cap-nurse.

Mrs. Mayoza only felt strong enough in mind and body to keep up the good work. Her colleague departed, to take up her work elsewhere than in the field of nursing. How lonely the following months must have been to Mayoza! No one to sympathize with her when things went wrong, no one to study Materia Medica with her, and worse of all—no one to gossip with about the older nurses. My, how she did hate those Senior nurses. How vain, how lazy, and oh, how strictly professional were they! And how they seemed to look down on the younger nurses. Is it any wonder that Snooks was lonely, and is it surprising that she looked forward to the arrival of four probationers?

And they really came. What an eventful day May the 1st must have been for these romantic girls just out of school. Hard work they did not mind, in fact they rather enjoyed the novelty of it. And as for the disdainful glances and cutting remarks of the Seniors—well they made no more impression on those "probes" than they would have on marble statues. They respected the Seniors, applied themselves dilligently to their work, and were never caught eating in the ward.

But how they managed to talk to the Internes without getting caught is something we will never know. The fact remains—they must have—otherwise we account for the meetings in the swing as those of chance. Thence forward their doom was sealed. Of all the gossip and scandal ever started, these four girl's names always brought forth the most choice bits. Their names were on every tongue. They were criticised, they were given curtain lectures—all to no avail, unless to accentuate them in their mischief.

Regardless of the huge opposition and unjust criticism, they were taken off probation in due time and became cap-nurses. Were they elated? Certainly, because they thought they could make themselves more attractive in their new uniforms. But they soon felt natural as cap-nurses and responsible personages. Rather, we should say, two did. The other two, the novelty of the game having worn off and being encouraged from their expedition, decided on a more dangerous one—that of matrimony. The two faithful ones, Mary Lowery and Lillian Sparks, suffered the bereavement, but vowed then and there to live up to the reputation the four had made. They also decided to be helpmates to any and all probationers, as far as their dignity would allow. But by the time September rolled around and more probationers were expected, they were firmly convinced that their dignity would not permit them to so much as associate with "probes."

And it was under such auspices that the three new probes made their arrival. It was indeed a cool reception for them. They were initiated into their new work, and were drilled as mechanically as though they were machines. They threw their pride and vanity to the winds and worked as they had never worked before. So determined were they, their probation days were over before they realized it. When they became cap-nurses they were given more consideration, but more difficult became their daily tasks. In fact, so difficult, that one of the three did not feel equal to the occasion and took leave of her two classmates.

But Canie Dee Hawkins and Doris Rudisill, remembering the law about the "Survival of the Fittest" braced up and determined to make good. So creditably did these two acquit themselves, that they were accepted as members of the Junior class.

This small class of five was certainly a congenial bunch of girls. They stuck together through thick and thin. Each tried to held the other along, and what one knew was general knowledge in that class. They soon became intermediates and were not so conceited that they couldn't associate with the younger nurses. In fact, they gladly accepted the one Junior nurse, Julia Terrell, as a member of the family.

This class, now numbering six, determined to make a wonderful showing. Their studies became harder, but their minds enlarged to accomodate the surplus knowledge. For between Dietetics and Bacteriology they were in need of larger brains, if not new ones.

The second year passed into the third without any seeming misfortunes, but no one will ever know how near to misfortune's door they walked in a body. They decided to stick the third year out regardless, and when one by one they received their black bands, they took on new hope and new energy.

At last they were Seniors. But far be it from them to be dignified. They now felt as though they were on the home stretch. Time could not pass too fast, but instead of slipping by, as the first two years had done, it was dragging along, each day longer than the preceeding. Still, when the time for parting really came it brought with it a mixed emotion. For it was not only a time of hope and joy, but also a time of sadness. To think of parting after three short years of friendship, brought regret. The joys and privileges of being pupil nurses had been great, but not wishing to remain pupil nurses forever, the class of '22 parted; each to go her way and make the most of all opportunities.

And if you will now read the prophecy you can ease your mind as to the outcome of this unusual bunch of girls.

A PROPHECY

Come to my assistance, O, ye stars of the Firmament; help me unravel the mysteries of the future, and as I cast the horoscope for these, my friends, guide my footsteps into the innermost recesses of the heavenly bodies; and thus let me bring to light that which has hitherto been hidden to mortal eyes. Let me, with close scrutiny, gaze into the secrets of the years to come. Strengthen my powers of vision. Show me their future lives in all their aspects. Their tragedies and their comedies—I must see all, know all; for this is my appointed mission.

No sooner had this prayer been completed than, when into my soul this vision flew. It is the year nineteen hundred and thirty three.

In a far away land, along the shores of the Albanian river is the little village of Oakland. In a distant part of this burg, tucked away in a corner but otherwise known for its beauty, stands a modest bungalow. Ask the street urchin, any bill collector, street cleaner, or insurance agent, and each will tell you, the first with a smile, the second with a frown, the third with a grunt, and the fourth, with a tired, disconsolated look, that Miss Terrell is the possessor of the house. Let us enter. The dazzling lights, the spick and span look of everything, the aromatic odors issuing from the kitchen, all give mute evidence that an event of great importance is taking place. It is a house party.

As we listen to the conversation of the ladies assembled, we learn that each of these was a graduate of the same hospital in a certain city—namely, the General Hospital of Memphis, Tennessee. But years have brought changes. There is considerable truth in each of their respective narrations, though each one is magnifying her past successes and minimizing her failures. But it is altogether a very happy group.

Conspicuous among these is a certain lady, Miss Hawkins, once young, attractive, and considered very efficient in her profession. But due to her constant revelry and inconstant nature, high heels and low priced nursing salary, she was soon forced to modify her ways of life; and when opportunity presented itself, she accepted the position as assistant to an animal trainer, (a position which has always been in keeping with her temper) and sleight of hand performer, who delighted audiences four times daily. This young lady learned with marvelous rapidity the various tricks of her manager, and even went a few better on him. But due to the fact that some of the caged animals soon learned the tricks of their assistant keeper, they became unmanageable, and our friend was asked to resign.

The next three years she spent in traveling. She managed to save a little nursing money, and together with the price she obtained for her two baby carriages and two years alimony, she visited Monte Carlo. There, true to her luck on the wheel of fortune, she lost her all. Thanks to the influence of a Japanese Prince, she obtained passage on an American steamer and sailed for home.

She is at present seriously contemplating a change in her career, as she has been offered an enviable monthly stipend as head cook for a high class family. If she still can remember her secret formulas of vegetable compounds, if she can still make the same tasty dainties that she once made with such patience and perseverance out of questionable hospital material—if her ability is still such that she can make mouths water, nostrils dilate, eyes look, and ears listen, as she busies herself about a kitchen gas stove, then her's is the golden opportunity to make her fame known, and to display her talents as a culinary artist. It must come about, for Fate has so ordained.

Participating in this reunion is another classmate, Mrs. Mayoza. She has lost none of her charm, and eleven years of faithful service have only added more to her conscientious scruples as a nurse. Her's could have been the life of fortune and ease, had it not been for her strong adherence to nursing ethics. Listen: A certain undertaking establishment once consulted her in reference to giving her patients their patented Elizir of Death Pill. She considered the matter seriously for more than a month and decided that it would hardly be fair to the patients. And thus another laurel must be added to her crown of victory.

It must be admitted that in the celestial record it was read that in the year 1929, while in charge of a certain ward in a certain hospital, she sent a living patient to the morgue, and gave a flatus enema to a dead woman. But what of it? Can a flatus enema have such a deleterious effect on a dead woman? And wasn't the patient sent to the morgue her mother-in-law? And, besides, couldn't it all have been a mistake on her part? And didn't the husband of the woman sent to the morgue present Mrs. Mayoza with a handsome gift in appreciation of services? Carry on your work, Mrs. Mayoza but not to the morgue. There is a glorious future in store for you.

The next lady in this most interesting group is a doctor's wife. Had

Mary Lowry been able to escape the darts of Cupid, she might have achieved great things in the nursing profession. It is highly probable that with her blonde curls and winning ways, she might have captivated the heart of some neurotic old victim with more dollars than common sense. And she might now be riding in her own limousine instead of a Ford, which is a bit battle scarred by hubby's midnight journeys over country roads.

As she sits in the midst of this group of her former classmates, she glances out the window occasionally, to where Hammond, Jr., age seven, is throwing dirt in the eyes of h's little sister, and warns him in no uncertain manner of what he may expect as soon as she can get the baby to sleep. But finally, when their squabbles have ceased, and the baby on her lap has fallen asleep, she does not join in the general discussion around her at once—but sits with a preoccupied air, for she is wondering:

1. Will Old Jim Jones pay that fifteen dollars he's owed a year?
2. Will friend hubby be able to talk his latest victim into having an operation?
3. Will I get a new Spring hat this year?
4. Will we be able to have a larger car next year to accomodate our ever increasing family?

Be brave, Mary dear, and just remember, "the hand that rocks the cradle rules the world."

Little would one surmise that the gay and sprightly damsel of thirty-one summers, who, by her jolly laughter and fitting humor dominates the affairs of the afternoon, could boast such various experiences as her's have been.

She is the same identical maiden, who in the winter of 1928, aroused the interest of half a continent by publishing in the leading Journal of that day, (The Bachelor's Home Companion) under the caption of "Treat 'em Rough," a lengthy treatise on the shortness of the modern dress in its relation to the gradual failing vision of the uprising male generation. Had she stopped with this, matters would not have been so bad, but she ended her eulogy by boldly asserting that she would gladly contribute the earnings of her lifetime, (a ridiculously small amount) as a nucleus toward establishing an organization whose chief goal should be to teach young men the folly of such practice. But due to her very limited funds, and the strong opposition of the male element, this organization was never formed.

Miss Rudisill tried other social reforms, but realizing that she could not succeed, she became discouraged, and soon disappeared in the social havoc wrought by this modern day melting pot.

Nothing was heard of her for three years. Then one day the papers announced, with flaming headlines, that Miss Rudisill, who was once a nurse in the M. G. H. had just returned from the island of Yap, where for a year and a half she had been busily engaged in the none too romantic task of producing an implement of suction, that had hitherto been unknown to the scientific world; namely, a rubber nipple that would serve the purpose of feeding two infants at the same time from the same bottle. Every mother of twins will enthusiastically agree with us that this will be the most wonderful labor saving device that motherhood has ever known.

In order that our readers may no longer wonder as to the why and wherefore of things, we must tell them that the pair of twins who recently won the prize in a baby contest, belonged to no other than our own Miss Rudisill. Yes, we repeat—MISS Rudisill, and thereby hangs a tale.

One summer morning, as she was indulging in day dreams of her past experiences, and gazing with half closed eyes into a doubtful future, she was suddenly aroused by the entrance of her maid of all work, who reluctantly announced that she had just discovered a basket containing a pair of twins, on the front door steps. Miss Rudisill was so overcome with amazement, that she could only stare at first, but as she looked into the depths of their baby eyes, the conviction came to her that at last she was to give to the world two living exponents of her former theories. Had we been allowed by the powers above to prophecy the futures of the two kids, were we at liberty to tell you that these two "Ideal humans" are destined to become the greatest exponents of free love that the world has ever dared to dream about, could we with safety reveal that Miss Rudisill at the age of 42 is at the head of a secret society that endeavors to abolish the divorce laws, and instead institute a new "Go when you Please" schedule, then our prophecy would have been completed. But we will leave you, Miss Rudisill, in company with your classmates. Worry not about the success or failure of your new suction apparatus. Strive to be an ideal mother to your adopted twins, and if more should come, by hook or crook, then be indulgent. Our years on earth are numbered; make the best of it. If the past is any index to the future, then your's will be a life of romantic adventures, and the climax will be worth while.

One of this class of 1922, Miss Sparks, is absent from the group today.

It is thought by some that she is in a remote part of Europe, while others have heard rumors that she has been seen in company with a Chinese Spiritualist, whose advice she sought about a stage career.

It all came about in this manner. She always had a great longing for the bright lights and the fame of an actress. She was once granted an interview with the manager of a small company of chorus girls, but he very frankly, even brutally, advised her that she had entirely too long a neck and too thin limbs to cause much excitement as a cabaret artist, and suggested that she try her luck as a movie actress. He was even generous enough to give her a letter of introduction to a motion picture promotor of his acquaintance.

As the champion gum chewer of one of his newest comedies was in a hospital with a broken jaw, the manager decided to give our friend a tryout. She chewed to such good advantage, and flirted between acts in so demure and bewitching a fashion, that she was given the place permanently. All might have gone well and she might yet be ascending the ladder to stardom, had it not been for the fact that a certain young suitor of her hospital days appeared on the scene one day when her jaws ached, and everybody, from the manager to the camera man, was making life miserable for her.

Let us omit a description of the scene which ensued. Suffice it to say that her suitor was as victorious as usual, and as the Chinese spiritualist had foretold, she was carried away from her life dreams to a life of dull realities. And so, merrily rang the bells, and they were married! We refrain from giving a detailed account of their first three years of married life, or as to which one of her two offsprings she considered a most likely follower of Charley Chaplin. Be it known that both were comical enough to be first rate comedians, an art which they learned from the ridiculous scenes which were daily enacted in their presence. We will glance at this family only once more as they pass through the city streets, comfortably seated in a 1923 tin Lizzie. The spokes of the wheels are securely tied with kangaroo tendons. On the rear seat of this snorting, shaking, rattling, camouflaged modern car, one could distinguish hammers and saws, nails and files. The emblem on the leaky radiator assures us that an M. D. is driving it. Let them drive on. We shall follow them no further. Miss Sparks, the stars incline, but do not compel. You can be master of your own destiny if you wish. Be careful of a young M. D. Take his compliments with a grain of salt. Say "no" if you so desire, but do not be too choicy in your pickings.

And last, but by no means of least importance, is Miss Terrell, the hostess of this week-end reunion. Her's has been indeed a checkered career. With her jolly brown eyes and even temperament, she takes life pretty much for granted, and continues to hope that her next male patient will be the real Prince Charming! Were she less optimistic, disillusionment might have shattered her hopes for the future. Her first patient made love so ardently and to such good advantage that the poor, unsuspecting girl was won completely, and was ready to elope, when an irate and long suffering wife appeared on the scene and carried the hero away.

But, nothing daunted, the dear girl was determined to try her luck again. The next matrimonial prospect was a widower with some small children. Now, this being just a little different from what she had pictured in her day dreams, she felt that she should ponder long and carefully before becoming a step-mother. But, alas! just as she had decided to make her answer "yes" she received a short note, saying that the young widow Brown had that day become a bride again.

So now we find her, ten years after her graduation, still a bachelor maid, but—still hoping. Will your hopes come true? But never mind, dear child, ours is not the mission to break hearts or shatter hopes. If to live to a comfortable old age, surrounded by time-tried friends, in the midst of plenty, is to be considered a disgrace or a misfortune, then our most heart-felt sympathy is yours.

But be optimistic. We see a terrific storm gathering on the distant horizon. If the stars should clash, as clash they must, then our predictions will not come true.

Our prophecy has now come to a close. Through the kind benevolence of the tell-tale heavenly bodies, we have most faithfully fulfilled the mission with which we were instructed. If by some word or hidden meaning, we have injured your finer senses, then truly your forgiveness we employ. We shall, with great interest, look forward to the future, and with a heart full of hope and an ever constant prayer on our lips, we shall request the angels of mercy to lead your steps aright, and shall say as did a poet of old: "May your joys be as deep as the ocean, and your sorrows as light as its foam."

THE FINISHED NURSE

(With apologies to Kipling)

If you can keep your head when those about you
Are loosing their's and moving in on you,
If you can trust yourself when Doctors doubt you
And keep within the proper limits, too,
If you can make a heap of laundry linen
And have it ready early Monday morn.
And loose it, start anew with smiles most winning
And not regret the day that you were born;
If you can give a bath in fifteen minutes
And dress a wound nor lose the "sterile touch"
If you can keep on terms with your room-mate,
If all men count with you, but none too much,
If you can learn the art of good suggestion
And practice it and not talk nurses' "shop,"
If you can answer any doctor's question
And decrease digitalis drop by drop
And keep a chart without a single error,
And know by heart the ladies of the board;
If you can come to class room without terror
And not forget the meaning of a word;
If you can rise at dawn and report at seven
And do a hard day's work till 8 P. M.
And then give up your time to make things even,
And keep your apron spotless to the hem,
Sponge, miss your supper, and admit a patient,
Report at roll call, get off at eight,
Attend a lecture and be put on "special"
And then get sat on for a weary gait,
If you have in your heart the hopes of winning
Only the good and not deceitful game,
If you can see life ending and beginning
And treat those two imposters just the same,
If you can live on five or six odd dollars
And dress as well as with a fuller purse,
You've done the stunt and all that's in it
And then my dear you will be a finished nurse.

OUR MATRON

A cottage gray, a place tha't gay
On Madison 8—5—2,
Made so by one who chases the blues
And gives every girl her dues;
Up at six with her jolly laugh,
Ready to travel the same old path.
Seeing that all our rooms are clean,
Putting fresh linen where we go to dream.
"Lights out, girls, ten-thirty's here,
Go to bed and have no fear."
Then reading and waiting for some,
Who at eleven will come.
Serving the punch,
To our dancing bunch;
Being a friend to all the girls,
Keeping us straight with the world.
A guardian angel to every "probe,"
Helping them over all the rough roads.
Faithful through all with a heart that's kind,
Just as she's been seven years now behind.
And as our memory goes back o'er days that are passed,
We'll always remember Miss Julia, our friend, first and last.

HISTORY

First impressions last they say,
But sometimes they're not there to stay:
For the first seven months of the 20th year,
That came in the 20th century my dear;
Brought us "probes" to sign the pledge,
Obey the Seniors and scrub the window ledge.
The nights rolled by and the eighth month came,
And with it brough two that had come to gain,
A knowledge of what hospital walls contained.

Their trouble began when the children's hospital opened its doors to admit two frightened girls in stiffly starched blue dresses; and to impart the knowledge that probationers should be seen working, and not heard. Hope and Schmidt weathered the trials of the next three months, and proudly donned their caps and bibs with the satisfaction of knowing that they could now give a hypo, and expect other "probes" to scrub.

Now Schmidt, the beauty of the class, with her raven locks and plump rosy cheeks, is interested in any case with James connected to it.

Her greatest ambition is "that my finger nails be my chief asset of beauty," and chief worry "will they save my chair in class." She constantly regrets the sin she has committed since coming into our midst. One redeeming feature stands out: Her faithfulness to duty.

Hope, better known as Hopeless Hope, is greatly interested in Foreign Missions. Some day we expect to hear of her taking a preachers heart in hand and sailing for Africa. She is an ardent believer in hamburgers, limburger cheese, and Coca-Cola. Also noted for her ability to run F. Ward. Small of stature, but with a heart that is steadfast and true.

And so now as another page goes down in history, we wonder what the future has in store for "The Two Lone Stars."

NURSE'S DICTIONARY

A handy guide for those wishing to enter the M. G. H.

Blackband—A stripe worn on Senior's caps to enable the public to distinguish them from probationers.

Chemistry—Hell from 4 to 5 on Thursday.

Home—A place in which to eat, sleep, and be merry, for tomorrow we may get shipped.

Hospital—A place where colors vary.

Intermediate—Those who signed up to go home, but remained to learn that the bladder is not in the stomach and a ductless gland is not a gland without a duck.

Lights Out—An annoying command given at 10:30 P. M., when the nurses want to talk "Brys Dollar Sale" the most.

Matron—One detailed to report nurses coming in after 10:00 P. M., and who is always on the job.

Receiving Ward—A small room where two internes work day and night examining patients. If the patient has stomachache they give him iodine internally, if he has spinal meningitis or merely lock-jaw, they apply it externally, and in very bad cases they give out pills.

Probationer—The poor devil who knows nothing and does less.

Staff Nurse—One who makes as much trouble for the Seniors as the Intermediates. Her head is very apt to get into a swollen condition immediately after landing a job in the M. G. H. In some cases the swelling is permanent.

Uniform—A dress that keeps a nurse from worrying in the morning about whether she will wear her black or blue dress.

HISTORY OF THE CLASS OF '24

The success of this class was assured from the time the Hospital doors opened in February to admit the baby of the training school. Though a blonde started the history that we are trying to put into print, brunettes are in greater number now, although it seems that the credit of the classes beginning must be given to the "baby blonde." Success does not always come to blondes, so later in the year this one member was assisted in her work by numerous girls of the other type.

Along with the New Year came Carrie Lee Lowry, the small beginning of this class. At first we thought that she would not linger with us long, because of other interests, but lately she has shown an ever increasing interest in drugs, and we hope her future is assured. Her blonde hair and winning smiles won all our hearts from the first and she still retains them.

Lucille Quinn and Jessie Cox made their debut as February's children. Quinn is tender in years and has the reputation of being the class monkey. Laughter prevents her from having any ambition; she is always sweet tempered and jolly.

Cox, her colleague and room-mate, is very ambitious as to a rest cure. She is noted for her ability to never be found, and to talk instead of work. We think she would make a better housekeeper than a nurse. She constantly listens for the rattle of a tin Lizzie. Her quiet nature hides a heart that is good and true.

Next is the March hare, Mary Pope, coming like a lamb, but capable of acting like a lioness when sufficiently irritated. She is usually heard and not seen. Her ambition is to clean up Isolation. She is the most economical member of the class, as she has never been known to lose even thirty cents or break a medicine glass. She is usually able to fight her own battles, but always with a smile.

Maude and Minnie Mae Coulter came with the May Flowers. Maude is constantly studying to learn everything, so we know that a Post Graduate Course in New York will be of great benefit to her. She is the class bureau of information, and a regular nurse.

Minnie Mae, the younger of the two, is noted for her sweet disposition and faithfulness to duty. She always studies hard and tries to love everyone.

Mary Wiseman began her career as a nurse at Tupelo, Miss., in February

1921. Her first duty was to put up gauze sponges. She decided that her efforts should be crowned with more success, so in August she entered the M. G. H. True hearted and whole hearted, she has labored to surpass them all in studies and work. She is worrying as to whether her ambition will be realized. Her chief question is: Why won't rest and raw eggs cure joints stiff with old age?

Ella Mae Phillips is another foreign member of our class, but she has been warmly received at the M. G. H. Her duties were first taken up at the Lucy Brinkley Hospital in February 1921. She took a vacation in July and came here in October. She is a natural ruler, especially where one person is concerned. She is of the tribe with the motto: "Be not too swift, but sure."

We have seen that Dame Fortune touched this class with her Fairy wand, giving it beauty, faithfulness, modesty, and dignity. Let us now journey on our way, assured that the future history will be as successful and happy as has been the past.

THEIR LOFTY AMBITIONS

- Mr. Purvis—To economize by dispensing with chocolate milk and matches.
Miss Weems—To own a Ford and blonde chauffeur.
Miss Rogers—To get the girls to class on time.
Miss Julia—To catch all the mice in the nurse's home.
Miss Stanton—To convince the girls that she is night Superintendent.
"Slick" Taylor—To be a policeman or doughnut maker.
Dr. McCormick—To be considered an authority on shooting bull.
Dr. "Red" Thompson—To bite some one.

SOCIETY

Society is a feature of the Medical student's life that is not very prominent. The absence of the fair sex in our midst tends to reduce the desire for college social functions; and, too, the hard pushed student does not have much time in which to trip the light fantastic toe. But once in a while the pent up energy must be released, so "the crowd" gets together and "throws a dance."

One of our artists drew us a pretty picture to represent society. We didn't want to throw away the picture, so in order to use it we will have to say a few things about some of the dances we have had.

THE FRESHMAN DANCE

Quite mysteriously a sign appeared on the bulletin board one Monday morning about three weeks after school began, which read as follows: "It is customary for the Freshman Class to entertain the upper classmen with a dance. The day designed is next Friday night."

Without a word of protest the Freshmen responded to their President's call and gave one of the best dances the school has ever known. They were excellent hosts and everyone congratulated them upon their success of the evening.

It was in the Fall of the year and the beautiful Autumn colors were used, which were combined with the Orange and White. Most of the class declared a holiday Friday afternoon and each committee went zealously to work. Several of them almost depleted the countryside of its colorful foliage, and confiscated cornstalks from as many corners as possible. Several carloads were dumped in the large entrance hall and for a little while the decoration committee looked helplessly at the mass, but they soon started to work sorting and arranging. Corners were transformed into miniature cornfields with blinking Jack-O-Lanterns peeping from behind the stalks of corn. The rest of the hall was transformed into a regular fairyland, with many Jack-O-Lanterns winking at the joyous crowd. Large painted crepe paper lanterns covered the ceiling lights, and could be seen through the Orange and White canopy below. The orchestra, which was hidden behind palms and ferns, played all the popular pieces to be enjoyed by the two hundred guests present. Punch, which equaled the Nectar of the Gods, was dispensed by Martha. The chaperons and Hostess wore lovely corsages of orange and white chrysanthemums.

THE DAVID MAHLON CATTELL DENTAL SOCIETY THANKSGIVING DANCE

The Thanksgiving holidays are always looked forward to with great pleasure, for they are the first days of relief after two months of hard work. But the one thing which brings the most enjoyment is the dance given on Wednesday night just before the holidays begin. Every year, since the society began, this dance has been looked forward to by the students and their friends.

This year the dance was given in the beautiful ball room of the Nineteenth Century Club. The room was artistically decorated with the University and the society colors.

A large crowd of young people enjoyed the evening as guests of the society. The chaperons were presented with lovely corsages of orange and white chrysanthemums, tied with the society colors.

THE TEXAS CLUB DANCE

When the Longhorn Club was organized it gained recognition among the student body by giving a rip-roaring dance at Rogers Hall. And when we say rip-roaring we mean it, for they had cow boys, regular Injun pistols, hip pocket displays, and all the jollification which just naturally accompanies the fellows from the Lone Star State.

The entrance hall to the building was decorated with holly and misletoe, combined with the University colors of Orange and White.

ANOTHER D. M. C. DANCE

Hark! hark! The Spring is here,
The air is full of Atmosphere:
Oh! Can it be or is it not,
It is, it is, but where and what.

And as a result of the approach of Spring and the end of school, the Senior class spread on a dance with the help of the David Mahlon Cattell Society. Invitations were sent out for April the seventh. Everyone came, and upon leaving pronounced it the best they had attended.

The Nineteenth Century Ball Room was profusely decorated in dogwood blossoms and yellow jonquills, giving the room quite a Fairyland appearance. The harmonious blending of the colors worn by the young ladies added to the bewildering illusion, which would have seemed real, but for the sound of the modern music and the funny movements of the people present.

The Seniors were presented with a buttonaire, consisting of a white rosebud tied with a small piece of orange ribbon, so that they could be distinguished for the rest of the crowd, or as one said, from the common herd. They certainly were the lions of the hour, and they will long remember their dance as members of the school. We hope that some of them, with their wives and families, will be our future chaperons. The society also presented the chaperons of the evening with corsages of white carnations, tied with orange ribbon.

HISTORY OF FOOTBALL AT THE UNIVERSITY

Football at the Memphis Departments of the University is only in its infancy. The first team donned the pads at the beginning of the 1920 season. Funds were not available to hire a coach, so J. A. Gronauer, a Junior Dental student, and a man of extensive football experience, assumed the responsibilities of coach and captain, and Gordon L. Gilbert was chosen manager. Light games were played, of which five were won, two lost, and one tied. By taking into consideration all existing conditions, this was considered a good beginning.

THE 1922 SEASON

For the 1922 season Coach Hodge was employed, George L. Carman, a former Commodore, was elected Captain, and Gordon L. Gilbert was re-elected to the position of manager. An athletic council was elected by the student body, which functioned as the governing board for all forms of athletics.

The season of 1922 is classed as a real success. Of the eight games played the Doctors won eight, and were scored on only twice during the season. The Orange and White machine ended its schedule with a total of 156 points to their opponents twelve.

The bright prospects at the beginning of the season materialized and a most formidable football machine was developed out of the Orange and White huskies. Great credit is due Coach Hodge for his splendid work. His efforts were unflagging and nothing was left undone to further the success of the team.

THE GAMES

Doctors 41      Crockett Technical 0

The first game of the season was little more than a tryout of the players. Tech fought gamely but was unable to stop the heavy onslaught of the Doctors. More than thirty men were tried out by the Doctors; all showing exceptional ability.

Doctors 14      Union University 0

The Union University preachers invaded the Doctors lot October the 8th with threats of capturing their stronghold and making way with all Doctors hopes in sight. They were forced to call in their threats and shoulder the disappointment. Their plan of attack was the aerial route, but with no avail. Coach Hodge resorted to straight football. The "Bull Dogs" growled and barked, but the Doctors knew that a barking canine never bites, so on over them the Orange and White machine rolled.

Doctors 13      Bethel College 6

The Presbyterians from Bethel College made their pilgrimage here on October the 15th, and found the Doctor's machine missing on five of its six cylinders, as an aftermath of the Union University game the Saturday previous. Coach Mitchell's Preds were light but heavy enough to fight. A forward pass and a thirty-five yard run gave them their lone score in the last three minutes of play. This was a heart breaker, as it was the first opponents to cross the Doctor's goal line this far in the season. The Doctor's scored once in the first period and again in the third.

Doctors 20      Middle Tennessee Normal 0

The Teachers from Murfresboro gave the Doctor's one of the hardest battles of the season. Fierce tackling and bloody fighting was a scene that will doubtless ever be duplicated on Hodge Field. It was in the second quarter of this game that "Danny" Coles got away with his famous "Hide and Seek" play for the first score of the game. A few minutes later the fleet-footed Pat Riley made his record run for 98 yards, which will long be remembered by University fans.

Yes, and we remember, too, that "Spiritual Awakening" that night when the loyal old bunch, 250 strong staged the "Memorable Shirt-tail" parade down town and at Loew's.

ARKANSAS COLLEGE

Doctors 19      Arkansas College 0

'Twas November the 4th we took a walk over in Arkansas. The Panthers were too light for the Doctors onslaught, but as their name implies, they were scrappy. The thousands who witnessed the game will never forget the name "Schwill," because of the numerous time he literally riddled their line. The Doctors never allowed them within 20 yards of their goal, and were held for four downs by them twice.

CONWAY NORMAL

Doctors 28      Conway Normal 0

Armistice Day found Coach Estes and his teachers from Arkansas Normal on the Doctors territory. Dopsters gave the teams an equal chance in the holiday matinee, as they were evenly matched in age and experience. However, the Doctors upset the dope, and before capacity stands of loyal supporters, scored once in the third quarter, and three times in the fourth in a gallant come-back. It was in the final score of this game that Jake Plesosfky won great recognition by blocking a kick and crossing Arkansas' goal line.

UNIVERSITY OF MISSISSIPPI

Doctors 24      'Ole Miss. 6

The game with the University of Mississippi was the big game of the season, and was severely contested in a field of mud. Mississippi made a savage attack upon the Doctors forwards to start the game, and this mixed with some short forward passes, netted them considerable ground; but when they reached the Doctors 20 yard line they were held for downs.

On the first down, after the Doctors got possession of the ball, Schwill made 55 yards off right tackle, which finally netted their first score. The Doctors scored again in the second quarter, and 'twas here the fleet-footed Barber got away for a 65 yard run and Mississippi's lone score. The Doctors scored again in the third on Riley's long run and again in the fourth on Schwill's drop kick from the 35 yard line. The Ole Miss team showed the result of careful coaching, but they lacked the aggressiveness to handle the varied attacks of the Doctors.

MILLSAPS COLLEGE

Doctors 14      Millsaps 0

Thanksgiving the Doctors journeyed to Jackson Mississippi to battle Millsaps College. The Doctors backs started the game with a fierce attack on Millsaps' forwards, which netted them 14 points in the first quarter. The remainder of the game was an exchange of punts and very little straight football. The contest was devoid of thrills, except in the last minute of play, when Overall, for Millsaps, got away for 60 yards and planted the oval on the Doctors 10 yard line, where the game and a successful season ended.

BANQUET

The local alumni and members of the faculty were hosts to the football team at a banquet given at the Hotel Gayoso on the evening of Dec. the 12th. A large crowd enjoyed this complimentary event, and particularly the after dinner speeches, which assured the local departments of co-operation from the professional, municipal and civic organizations in the city.

At the mention of a captain for next year all eyes turned to Otto Schwill, who was unanimously elected. He accepted with a clever talk, full of pep and enthusiasm. The pledging of co-operation from the leading organizations of Memphis is the greatest boost athletics has ever had here, and assures us of future success.

FOR THOSE WHO DID NOT MAKE A LETTER

It is not possible for every member of the squad to make a letter; neither is it possible to have a team of only eleven men. We therefore take pleasure in giving special recognition to the following men who faithfully attended practice, and were an important factor in the development of the team: Shanlever, Herd, Andrews, Gronauer, Turner, Stansberry, Marschall Venza, Coffman, Howard, Nailor, Davis, and our ever faithful water boy, Pinkey.

OUTLOOK FOR THE SEASON 1922

The prospects for the next season are very bright. Captain Carman, Danny Coles and Jack Gardner are the only letter men who will not report for duty at the rise of the curtain next fall. These men will be missed a great deal, as they were essential cogs in the Doctors Machine.

Otto Schwill has been chosen to lead the team next year. Otto is one of the most popular men in school, and has had extensive football experience. Prospects for new material look exceptionally good, as a number of men of experience throughout the country have already stated that they would don a Doctors uniform when the season opens.

Another good thing, while we are mentioning outlooks, is the access to a real park for games and practice. This will no doubt be an important factor in elevating the standard of athletics at the University.

Charles Campbell will be the manager of the team for 1922 and will have a strong schedule.

BERT HODGE

"Bert" as he was known, came to us very highly recommended and particularly so, as the man in whose record the word "LOSE" did not appear, and he proved this to the satisfaction of all when he put us through the season without a single defeat, piling up a total of 166 points to the opponents lowly 12. His remarkable success is attributed to his ability to develop the very best there is in a man and his splendid personality. He won the respect and admiration of the members of the squad early in the season which continued until the sound of the last whistle Thanksgiving. Although he is leaving us to accept a position as head coach at Cumberland we assure him that the many friends he made while with us extend best wishes for continued success.

1921 SQUAD

GEORGE L. CARMAN

George came to us at the beginning of the season of 1920. He was formerly a regular tackle on the Vanderbilt team and was on a Division team while in the Army. He was a regular halfback on the Doctor's team in 1920 and at the end of the season was chosen Capt. for 1921, which place he filled skillfully and occupied a position at end. George was a sure, hard tackler, and always one of the hardest working men on the squad. He receives his degree in Pharmacy this June. We are sure that George will be greatly missed, as he was not only a good football player but a pleasant character and beneficial from a standpoint of morale.

M. F. GARDNER

"Scrapiron" is an old-timer on the gridiron having played on the Holy Cross and St. Ambrose teams before coming to us in 1920. He was a regular on the 1920 team at fullback. He hit 'em low and hard and broke everything from his opponent's heart to his own nose. His appearance on the field never failed to bring applause from the stands due to his great popularity among the fans. Jack was a valuable asset to the team and will be missed much as he gets his degree in Dentistry in June.

OTTO SCHWILL

Otto needs no introduction to Southern football. He was a power on the Mississippi A. & M. team and coached a team on the Pacific Coast while in the Navy. He has no equal when it comes to ripping a line, tackling, or handling forward passes. His election to lead the 1922 Doctors came as no surprise to Tennessee followers.

MERRICK COLES

"Danny" donned the colors when the Doctor's team was first organized and has been in every game since. He was the lightest man on the team but this was made up for by his clever headwork. Danny was known for his "Hiding-Out" trick and many scores can be accounted for as a result. He was always up to form and irrespective of weight was one of the fiercest tacklers that Tennessee fans have ever seen. He will be missed in the line-up next year. This is not a farewell to him as he has an office here in the city and says that he will play the old game from the side lines. Best wishes from all.

CLAYTON FORD

"Bugger" came to us from the Praying Colonels of Center College. His consistent playing always attracted attention. The coach was never worried about any plays going over his tackle. He was one of the largest men on the team and always made his presence felt. Ford will be back next year and should be a valuable man among the Doctor's forwards.

HERBERT A. RILEY

"Mickey" was put at quarter the first of the season, but was soon shifted to a halfback. He was one of the fastest men and the best broken field runner the University has ever produced. He has an educated toe and his field goals after touchdowns added many points to the Doctors scores. We are glad that Pat will be with us next year.

OTIS BECK

"Bully" played his first season with the Doctors this year. He was placed at quarterback and proved himself an experience general. He is a lightweight but this was overcome by his speed and ability to pick a hole in the opponent's line. The gridiron is home to Bully as he was quarterback for Ohio Wesleyan two years. He should be at his best next season and a regular at the general's position.

GEORGE GRAHAM

"Horse" the Ex-Castle Heights center is another one of the boys of 20. His first year he was used at tackle, but this year Coach Hodge saw fit to shift him over to guard where he remained all thru the season, withstanding many assaults but always coming out on top. George is game to the core, a hard worker and a fierce tackler. He will be back and should be a bulwark of strength in the Doctor's defense next year.

HAROLD BIRK

Harold gained his earlier experience at Central High School here in the City, being a letter man on their team at center in 1917. He is a veteran of the 1920 Doctor team and was in every contest except for a short time he was out with an injured knee. During the past season he was used as offensive center and defensive half. Harold has one more year and will undoubtedly be a star in the 1922 line-up.

ROBERT LAIRD

"Handsome" the famous ex-McTyeire star made his debut with the Doctors this year. Robert's specialty was "Spilling" interference. You will recall his stunt of scattering Ole Miss lads all over the lot November 19th. Great things may be expected of this sturdy, consistent, hard-working youngster next season.

NEIL LEONARD

"Benny" played his first year as a regular on the Doctor's team. He was at right-half and took part in most of the games of the season. His dazzling speed made him a menace to opposing teams at all times. With this year's experience Benny should tear things up next season.

JAKE PLESOFSKY

Jake is another of the 1920 vets. He is a powerful lineman and has caused many plays directed toward the Doctor's line to end in failure. Jake is a conscientious worker, a hard tackler, and always in form. He has another year in which to display more of his ability and experience.

ARNOLD CARMAN

"Little" Carman is a kid brother of Capt. Carman. He is a former McFerrin star, having performed at half for them for four years prior to coming to the University of Tennessee. Arnold had continuous trouble with a weak ankle, however the sturdy youngster starred in five of the season's most stubborn contests. He is light but easily overcomes this with his speed and side-stepping ability and should be a star in the backfield next season.

M. S. DOAK

"Spike" the ex-Tusculum star did not get an early start on account of the arrangement of his studies, but when he did come out he came strong, and playing at half participated in four of the hardest struggles of the season. He hit the line hard and could always be depended on for a gain of several yards and often times long end runs. Doak has two more years and will be present when the whistle blows.

THOMAS L. MELVIN

"Stuffy" filled a regular position at end and was well qualified for the assignment having had two years at end on the Braham-Hughes team. They didn't get too large or too tough for Stuffy. He was always in the thickest of the battle, a fast runner and a game tackler and all-in-all an ideal end. He will be in the pads for the first practice next year.

EDDIE RAYNOR

Eddie took his apprenticeship in the grid sport at Cincinnati High. This was his first year as a Doctor. He was used at center and played his position skillfully. He was always fighting and made the center of the line almost impregnable. He is heavy, a fierce charger and a heady player. He will be back next year better than ever.

ROBERT S. COOKE

"Bob" was shifted to the line early in the season, and although a bit light this lad showed he had an abundance of the stuff tripe is made of. He deserves a world of credit as this was his first year on the gridiron. He always played a strong game and particularly so in the Bethel College game when the whole team threatened to blow up he kept his head. Bob would tear things up next fall but he is one of those to graduate in June.

(Contributed)

Mr. Gordon L. Gilbert, whom the boys are pleased to call "Red," was student manager of our Football Association during the Fall of 1920 and '21. Large scores were rolled up by our team, and many of the men on the squad made excellent individual plays, but no one in the organization gave greater stimuli than did Red Gilbert. Most of the credit for the success of the team can rightly be given to him. We feel that his successor will have to go some to beat his record. Since Gilbert will not be manager another year, we may, nevertheless, feel safe in expecting a lot from him in the future.

WILLIAM BRENNAN

Better known as Big Bill. Our new coach will be known among the student body as Uncle Bill. We are indeed fortunate to secure a man who knows the game as he does. He comes to us from Tulane University, where he has been associate coach for the past three years. Mr. Brennan is a product of McAllister College, Minneapolis, Minn. After graduation he performed on the gridiron for five years as a professional. His chief motto is, "Discipline to all alike."

CHAS. W. CAMPBELL

"Humpy," our new student manager, was selected from the group of embryo dentists. We are expecting a great deal from this precocious young man, and he has every evidence in his favor that he can fill the bill.

At the time of going to press we are pleased to learn that Campbell has already secured games for the coming season with some of the leading colleges in the South.

Jimmy Davant, sport editor of the Commercial Appeal, was an important factor in the success of our football team last Fall. His untiring efforts in boosting the team added a great deal to the morale of the players. Jimmy is always behind us and we want to sincerely thank him for what he has done for us and the school.

The things you see in the picture on the left are more or less responsible for several incidents that happened around these parts during the football season. Among these might be mentioned a few shirt-tail parades, which a lot of people in Memphis never saw before, or behind either, and some free for all fights down town one night in some of the theatres.

These cheer leaders will be on the job again next Fall stronger than ever. The Rotary Band will be present at all games to help out with the fuss.

JACK VENZA—"Kid Arsenic"

The University not only puts out winning athletics teams, but also winners within the ropes. We are well represented there in the personage of the toxic "Kid Arsenic." Jack came to us at the beginning of his second year, having had his first year at Tulane. He is a Beaumont, Texas lad, has a splendid record in the Navy, and a former U. of Texas man, where he made his debut in the ring. He was champion of his outfit in the Navy. Jack was a whale of an end on the 1921 football team, but was barred from the season of '22 by the M. A. A. as a professional fighter. He is of the feather weight type. He won all his bouts in 1920 when he represented Tulane in the Southern Amateur Athletic Union.

OTHER FORMS OF ATHLETICS

The doctors are not only game gridders but are skillful in all forms of athletics. In Basketball season and Baseball season they show the same fighting spirit. This was very clearly shown by winning the city championship in basketball the past season. After losing the first three games of the season they staged a comeback and never lost again during the remainder of the season, taking on the fastest teams in Memphis and surrounding territory. The following starred in this exciting cage race: Wyatt, Capt.; L. F.; Beck, R. F.; Riley, C.; Carmen, R. G.; Venza, L. G.; with Sindeband and Simmons as loyal subs. Much credit is due C. L. Greene for his skillful management which largely accounts for the success of the team.

We never fail to present the talent on the old diamond when the baseball season comes around. Among the applicants each season are men who have been shining lights on college diamonds, and they are always glad to get in. However, the inducements are not varied and competition is not so great owing to the fact that the doctors represent a professional school, and at this season of the year are not permitted to take extended trips. This would tend to disrupt them at examination time. The season ending, our boys have played twelve games and lost five which the doctors followers consider a creditable showing. Watch us grow athletically.

Bye, will see you on the old GRID this fall.

Dear Petie:—

It is at last a pleasure to be able to correspond with a gentleman of your delicate nature on subjects that I am entirely ignorant as to the chemical incompatibility. Of course I realize that in these days of indigestion that it is often times a question what to eat and what to leave alone for each microbe and bacillus have their every way to kill us but in passing I might ask if you could identify the following.

Para-dimethyl-amino-azoben-zeneor-thio-carboxylic acid or Methyl Red. Ointmentally speaking from a murcurical standpoint I should say that it is the pereferie-gymnsalification that arises from the bubble combustion and surrounds the flematical bande flowing through the jerefacibility.

Please notify me if correct as I would deem it a great favor to receive a letter from a man of your keyringing ability.

Thanking you for your kind attention and awaiting an early reply I am,

Miscroscopically yours,

EDITOR'S NOTE:

We have something here that furnishes a lot of food for thought. It sounds a little like Miss Grey's corner in one of the daily papers, only all the puzzles offered are not of matrimonial extraction. Let us see what we can do with these conundrums:

Dear Editor:

Will you please send me some rules explaining how to prepare dead bodies for the morgue? Why should the head be turned in a certain direction? Should the hands be folded across the chest or stomach? Does it matter whether the death tag is tied to the toe or finger? Will it be bad luck to let the clock still tick after the patient dies? Please help me out in these many worries.

—Edna Marable.

Let them die with their boots on and then they won't need much preparation. Turn their heads to the East so that the evening sun won't shine in their eyes. If the subject dies of a broken heart, due to lost love, fold the hands across the chest. If stomach ache be the cause of death, then place the hands accordingly. It might be a good idea to tie the tag to the finger to remind the patient that he is dead. It all depends on how many ticks it has left.

Dere Mr. Ettiter.

I want to no if u hav time two anser sum questuns for me & giv me a little infumashun. 1st, do u think there is any harm or if it will keep me frum going to Heaven if i chase butterflies in february? My bunkie says it is out of season and will get me into trouble. 2nd, is there any harm in hiding interns in the kitchen on a ward whin miss Stanton makes her rounds at nite? Lastly my bunkie says im krazy and i says shes a nut. What do you say? if u dont git this mr ettiter plese let me no & i will rite u another.

Thanking usomutch,

Lucena neubauer.

If you write any more letters like this you are liable to go where the weather is warm enough for you to chase butterflies all year. It all depends on what the internes are waiting for, whether you should hide them in the kitchen or not. I think you are both cuckoo. Sabe?

Mr. Editor:

It is such a problem trying to be a nurse. Everything that is not done right is blamed on me. I live in Newburn, but this is sure a slow joint here. I can dance and you ought to see me when Joe is looking at me. If you want me to I'll send you a picture of myself.

Your little friend,
C. S. Lowry.

You haven't nearly so big a problem as I have trying to answer these letters. No wonder Santa Claus is old and white headed. Yes, we must admit that this is somewhat of a synarthrodic joint. I think Joe must have been looking at you when you had your picture made for the Annual.

Dear Mr. Editor:

I am in training. I like training. I have been training for some time. I wear a nurses' uniform. It looks good on me. I like to look nice. I eat Mellen's food to keep the freckles off. I am going to have my picture made. I don't like boys but when I grow up I'm going to get married. Papa said I could.

Ruby Dodson.

As I understand it, Ruby, you are engaged in the business of training. Let us hope that you wear some kind of a uniform. Your Pappa expresses good judgement.

Mr. Editor:

I am so glad you have a great big heart and plenty of time to listen to my troubles. The Supt. put me in charge of a ward of negro women. The other night one old soul fell out of bed, but she wasn't hurt much, 'cause she didn't bleed nowhere.

Say, Mr. Editor, do you think there is a chance for me to sell my late permits to "Rudy" and one of my dates to "Trappe." I think that would make them happy and me too. You know I wouldn't mind playing head nurse if I could burn the light all day, have lots of clean sheets and never have to take temperatures.

Did you ever break a thermometer? Well, it sure makes cold chills run up your back.

Goodbye

Marion Hope.

It dosen' matter so much as long as only the soul falls out of bed. Be careful about the rest of the body. Why not give your date away? Who wants to buy them? Which kind of thermometers do you break? Mouth? It might make a cold chill run up the patients back, but not up mine.

Dear Editor:

I heard that you understood children, so I wonder if you can understand me. No one around here does. Everything I do is wrong. I either break the technique, (whatever that is) or the thermometers, and then I have to pay for them; I mean the thermometers. I never can get in by 11:30 when I have a late permit, so they take it away from me and expect me to get in by 10:00 everynight. Now they ought to know I couldn't do that. But they don't. If they do they act like they don't. So poor me! I know a henpecked husband couldn't be much better off.

Lots of love,
Doris Rudisill.

I am not surprised that no one around there understands you. Impossible. Did you ever try doing anything right? Your love is appreciated, but it isn't of much use to me.

Mr. Editor:

You didn't know I was here did you? Well, I am, but I don't like it, because the night Superintendent is so hard on me. I don't have any peace. She's always trying to take my 'nights off' away from, just because I fail to wake up when she makes rounds at 3 A. M. That's naughty of her to treat me that way just because I'm little and can't help myself. Can you help me? Please try.

Your friend,
Cora Brock.

I didn't know you were here, but I was aware of something unusual in my presence. If the Supt. doesn't take off any more than your nights you should not complain. Of course a lot depends on how well you are prepared for such emergencies. Tell the Supt. that if she doesn't put on some shock absorbers and quit being so hard on you, that your "big bubba" will spank.

Dr. Clifton: Was this a negro patient?

Dr. McElroy: Dr. McIntosh you may proceed.

Dr. McIntosh: What we found at autopsy was a negro woman, female 163 CM long, heart weighed 250 pounds—I mean grams. Kidneys weighed 370 grams each. Capsule Stripped Easily, Etc.

Dr. Schmeisser: I would like to add that this was a Beautiful case of meningitis. In fact, it was wonderful. I have never seen a prettier case, and I brought this case up at the student conference today in order to demonstrate it to the Students. On opening the Dura we noticed a beautiful grayish-pink semi-translucent membrane covered with a thin somewhat opaque straw colored fluid, etc, etc.

Dr. McElroy: This is a good case and I want you to have the student to write up this case and examine the microscopic slides.

Dr. McIntosh: I'll not let them have my data either.

Dr. McElroy: Is there any further discussion?

Dr. Rudner: I made a diagnosis of mitral insufficiency without a stethoscope. It takes a keen diagnostician to make a diagnosis with his fingers.

Dr. L. L. Meyer: I had a case similar to this, and while on the operating table his heart stopped beating. I worked with him for ten minutes massaging his heart gently, and "By-George" he lived.

Dr. Goltman: That reminds me of once I was riding on an elevator and met Dr. Murphy and he showed the first Murphy button ever made, (very dramatic) and I said to Dr. Murphy, "This little button will revolutionize Gut Surgery."

Dr. McElroy: Is there anything to be said about the treatment of this case?

Dr. McKinney: If it had been my case I could have removed his tonsils under gas anesthesia. It takes a very rapid operator to do that, and unless a man is an expert, he had better do it under Ether.

Dr. Sanders: You gentlemen know that as a surgeon I have barely shed my umbilical cord, but I think I would have done a trephine.

Dr. McElroy: That reminds me of a joke. An old negro had been accustomed to hanging up a snake to bring rain. On being reproached for being so superstitious, and after deep thought, he says, "White folks, I not only think that it wouldn't do no good, but it would actually do hawm."

Dr. Maury: I can't say that I exactly understand the pathology in this case. I formerly did all my pathological work in my private laboratory, but I am not a competent pathologist.

Dr. Schmeisser: No indeed.

Dr. Swink: I doubt the blood count in this case.

"MIKE"

Willie

I've been unable to get any laboratory work done accurately. I have had cases of amebic dysentery, malaria, T. B., and lobar pneumonia and the blood count in all was 7600.

Dr. McElroy: Is there any further discussion?

Dr. Goltman: I think it is possible that this patient had an aneurysm. I would liked to have operated if he had. Until a few years ago there had only been 114 cases of aneurysmorrhaphies on record, 37 of which were done by ye humble servant.

Willith

Dr. Simpson: I would liked to have esophogoscoped this patient. With my new method, I can see nearly to the appendix.

Dr. Haase: I noticed in the record that the patient had a bad ingrowing toe-nail on his left great toe. I would like to ask why the attending physician did not ask for surgical consultation.

Lawrence

Dr. J. E. Johnson: That would have been an ideal case for plastic surgery. I believe I could have made him a new toe-nail probably from a fish scale, or from the horn of a goat.

Leroy

Dr. LeRoy: Gentlemen, it is already past nine o'clock, which is my usual bed time, and I move we adjourn.

Warnock—attempts to catheterize a patient with a Rehfluss tube.

McCreary—examines obstetrical case delivered two days before, and asks nurse when patient is to be confined.

Ford and Schwill, the "big boys" that graduated in pharmacy in two months, are now taking a course in blacksmithing at Roger's Hall.

HAR

Ferguson's Essence of Bumblejackets, Boxing Gloves and Pistols is proving to be very popular among the pharmacy students. It has been suggested that he have the secret formula patented.

McQueen's improved smokeless gunpowder will be on the market within the next century—if Mrs. Crawford returns as chemist.

THE PERFECT NURSE

Take an oceanful of energy, a tablespoon of guile,
 About a quart of innocence, a little less of wile;
 A pinch or two of naivette, and a touch or so of verve,
 A hamperful of courage, and just twice as much of nerve;
 A large amount of sweetness, and a sprinkling of deceit,
 And as much of human frailty as will make both ends meet;
 A brookletful of passion, and a riverful of love,
 The wisdom of a serpent, and the weakness of a dove;
 Take a big chunk of thoughtfulness, the same amount of care,
 And as large a sense of humor as the doctor says you dare;
 A tiny bit of cussedness, a good deal more of spice,
 And just enough of goodness so as not to be too nice;
 Now mix these all together, for better or for worse,
 Take a bucketful at bedtime and you'll be a perfect nurse.

Baptist Memorial Knows Cellucotton

Cellucotton has aptly been called "the perfect absorbent" for fillings in dressings. It absorbs from two to four times as fast as high grades of absorbent cotton.

Baptist Memorial uses one hundred pounds or more every week. Doesn't this show that Cellucotton is preferred above cotton for many purposes? This is only one of many similar hospitals.

CELLUCOTTON is the wood pulp cellulose material, which was first used for surgical work during the war. It is made by Kimberly-Clark Company, Neenah, Wis., and sold exclusively by the makers of CURITY Supplies.
